A special JVGR issue on
'Volcanic Lakes and Environmental Impacts of Volcanic Fluids'

From: Joop Varekamp <jvarekamp@wesleyan.edu>

Dear colleagues,

This is an update regarding the special issue listed above. The proposal for the Special Issue has been accepted by the Journal of Volcanology and Geothermal Research, and we have subsequently amended the time table as shown below. The potential topics of interest include

Volcanic lakes (genesis, time trends in composition, use for volcano monitoring, ecological impacts of volcanic inputs, analogs of systems from the far past on earth or on other planets, etc)

Hydrothermal effluents in ambient waters (groundwater studies, acidified rivers and lakes, drinking water quality impacted by volcanic effluents)

Modelling efforts regarding the volume, chemical or isotopic composition of volcanic fluids with applications to volcano monitoring, explanation of empirical trends, etc.

Isotope studies of volcano hydrothermal systems and their diluted derivatives.

Other related topics may be considered as well.

Please send potential titles and author information to Joop Varekamp (jvarekamp@wesleyan.edu) by August 15, 2005 (Manfred Vanbergen is in Indonesia-Australia for the next 6 weeks).

Time table:

Submission of Manuscripts - January 2006
Reviews by two outside reviewers
Compilation of reviews with remarks from editors returned to authors -
June 2006 Submission of revised manuscripts - October 2006 Production of volume - January 2007

Best wishes

Joop Varekamp & Manfred VanBergen
Guest Editors 'Volcanic Lakes' issue, JVGR
